2003
WILSHIRE

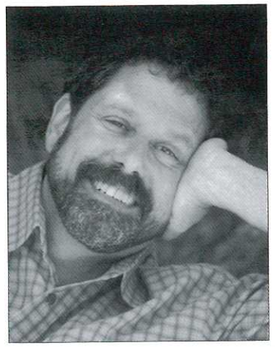
CAMPS



It was summer, 1999, and we began by bringing in four staff members from Israel through the Jewish Agency's "Summer Shlichim (representatives)" program. One served as an art director, one a dance director and two as counselors.

These extraordinary young people, most of whom recently finished their stint in the army, were at our camps to spend time with our campers and staff, build relationships and teach informally through stories, campfire sessions, etc., about life in Israel. After all, Jewish relationships and deeper Jewish identity are what camp is about. During a time in history when it is very difficult for us to get our young people to go to Israel, our second best option is to bring Israel to them by infusing the camp environment with the best and brightest of Israeli youth.

Last summer, five summers into our programmatic efforts to bring more Israelis to our camp staff, we had twelve Shlichim and two Tsofim (Israeli High School Scouts). Prior to summer one of our first year participants married our ROPES Course director (whom she met five years ago) and served as the head of the Israeli delegation, overseeing the group and the educational programs they organized and led.

The success has been astounding. Our campers and staff have developed personal relationships that will last for years. Many of us are still in touch with the "first four" and a number of our staff members are now visiting Israel, both on their own and through a variety of organized programs, inspired by the Israelis who came to work at our camps and who are now a part of their lives.

Teaching about Israel and fostering our community's relationship with Israel is an extremely important goal for our program. I am proud to have been part of the development of this aspect of our camps and thank all of the young people from Israel who have given so much of themselves so that our campers and staff could appreciate Israel's beauty and importance.
